Cinderella Builder Named In $100,000 Suit; Metropolitan Baptist Church Alleges 'Fraud'

Harold Coleman, labeled five years ago as "the amazing Cinderella Man" of the construction world and who in 1930 was reported to gross more than $1,000,000 in business, has been named in a $100,000 lawsuit filed in circuit court here.

Coleman, who heads the Prosperity Construction Co., 1115 N. Compton Avenue, has been named along with four other defendants in an action filed by the Metropolitan Baptist Church, 1403 Carr Street. Others named as defendants are Frank Dubman, Julius C. Garrell, George Hunache and Harry L. Dubman.

The church is asking $100,000 punitive damages accruing a lending agency of "fraudulently and falsely" inducing the church to execute a deed of trust on property owned by the congregation.

Coleman, who reached his peak around 1930, was reported to have pyramidized a real estate investment of $5000 into a construction company which held options and contracts totaling over $3,000,000.

Blaine said the money was to be used for church repairs. It was also alleged in the petition that there was no money loaned or other considerations paid to plaintiffs by the defendants.

Metropolitan, formerly known as Mount Moriah Missionary Baptist Church, has 350 active members. Rev. W. M. Wright is church pastor.

Rev. Delaine Will Fight Extradition

Lake City, S.C. (ANP) — Chief Maxie Hinds of the Lake City Police Department, and the Florence County sheriff's office said they will seek to extradite from New York the Rev. Joseph A. DeLaine, on an assault and battery charge.

Rev. DeLaine fled the state after a warrant was sworn out for his arrest on charges that he shot at a car containing four white men, wounding two of them.

The ministers' wife, who is in Columbia, S.C., reportedly found newsmen that on the night of the shooting she was up preparing musty lemons. She said that the fire of incendiary origin was started by the auto.

Police Did Nothing She charges that the Lake City police did nothing toward locating the people who last night threw bottles, orange crates and rocks at the DeLaine home, even after license numbers had been furnished.

Argus Search Witness In Till Case Vanishes

Henry Lee Loggins Once Lived Here

Where is Henry Lee Loggins? Where is the man who has been "fingered" by some Mississippians as one of those persons who rode the truck with hapless Emmett Till on the morning of August 28, 1955? He has been recently arrested and mutilated?

An investigation by the St. Louis Argus in Mississippi last week-end has shown that Loggins simply turned up on a coast-guard boat—Henry Lee Loggins is missing!

Associates of Loggins told a representative of the Argus in Glendora, Money and Mississippian City, Mississippi, that Loggins hasn't been seen since the morning of October 16.

The renewed search for the man, said to be able to "show the Till case wide open" came after word was received by the newspaper that Loggins had expressed a desire to leave Mississippi but was unable to do so.

A search by the Argus revealed that Loggins formerly lived in St. Louis and had relatives here. It seemed likely he would flee to this city.

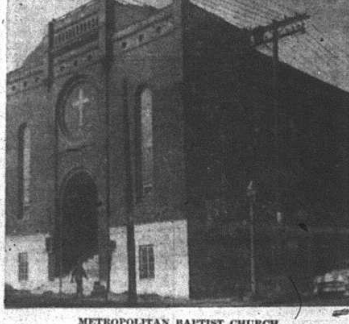

Other developments in this case which stubbornly retains a bizarre atmosphere, a third witness of the Till boy's murder is reported to have been willing to talk, if protected.

Reports that J. W. Milam was responsible for the murder of a Glendora Negro in 1949 were also circulating among the Negro residents in the Mississippi area, the Argus investigation revealed.

Concerning in 1952 reports by Rev. Martin Luther King, Jr. of 80 Sherman Avenue, Newark, New Jersey, has charged that he was told by his mother, Mrs. Marie Lewis, 83, who he last saw in 1941, that his brother, A. Lewis, was shot to death by W. Milam in 1944. This was the only time the Lewis family lived in Glendora.

THE REV. M. L. KING, JR. The Rev. M. L. King told reporters in Newark that Milam, who was then building a theatre in Glendora, killed his brother-in-law as quarreled with Milam—over

RELATIVES OF LOGGINS ARE WORRIED By STEVE DUNLOAN Relative of Henry Lee Loggins living in the St. Louis area are anxious for some word of the wild man who shot and "fingered" Loggins in Mississippi last week. Loggins lived in St. Louis for five years in 1952 and 1953. Records at the Fred Harvey Research show that he was arrested there in a dish washer. While in St. Louis he also worked a part-time for Jessie Battle, the court-appointed attorney for the St. Louis Argus. It is St. Twenty-third St. It was reliably reported during the Till trial in Sumner, Miss., that Loggins and Lewis "Too Tight" Collins witnessed as murder of the 14-year-old Chicago youth. Also during the trial there was widespread rumor that Loggins and Collins were kept from them from testimony against Roy Bryant and J. Milam, according to a Mississippi juror for the Till murder. Both men were employed on a farm operated by Milam's brother near Glendora.

Hennings' Subcommittee May Hear Mrs. Bradley

The Senate subcommittee on Constitutional Rights headed by Sen. Thomas Hennings of Missouri indicated to the Argus this week a willingness to hear Mrs. Mamie Bradley, mother of Emmett Till, to determine whether the Till case presents a denial of rights under the Federal Constitution.

It was reported last week the subcommittee would give Mrs. Bradley an opportunity to tell the story of the kidnapping and lynching of her son in Mississippi. This was confirmed Wednesday by Lon Hocker, chief hearing counsel for the subcommittee, in a telegram to this newspaper.

The subcommittee has already indicated its interest in the alleged problems in recording the testimony of Roy Wilkins of the NAACP at a Sept. 17 hearing, Hocker said.

They shall be glad to arrange personal interviews with Mrs. Bradley, preferably with her lawyer, to determine whether the case presents a denial of rights under the Federal Constitution.
